Each year, Family Voices of California hosts a statewide Summit in Sacramento to bring together families, youth, providers, policymakers, advocates, state agencies, insurers, and other stakeholders to identify and address challenges affecting one of California's most vulnerable populations: children and youth with special health care needs.

Family Voices of California is locally based, nationally connected

STORIES OF 2010 SUMMIT:

NITA THOMPSON

Nita described her visits to the State Capital : "The input I was allowed to share was reacted to positively." She proceeded to visit legislative offices in her area of Los Angeles and worked with Assembly member Anthony J. Portantino to achieve passage of AB52, a bill that proposes an umbilical cord blood collection program for public use. Governor Schwarzenegger signed the bill September 29, 2010! Passage of this bill is monumental in offering hope to those with sickle cell anemia as umbilical cord blood can treat the disease and immune disorders.

STORIES OF 2010 SUMMIT: LIBBY HOY

"It was not an appealing idea to talk with strangers about our mountain of debt, our low credit rating, and the stream of calls from collection agencies." But then she thought of the problems within the system and realized the importance of speaking out: "I thought about all the families, like ours, who are living just one medical crisis away from bankruptcy."

A representative of the American Academy of Pediatrics arranged a conference call between Libby and a group of U.S. Congressional staffers from the Committee on Energy and Commerce. Libby was at first daunted by the call, but Tara Robinson, FVCA's Manager, coached her on how to address the committee. During the call, Libby spent 20 minutes describing her family's experience with medical debt. The result? The committee invited her to come to Washington, DC to share her story if a hearing could be arranged.

STORIES OF 2010 SUMMIT: KEVIN-DAT VU

 At the 2010 Health Summit, Kevin learned how proposed budget cuts to health care could affect him and his community, fueling his fire to advocate for disabled youth. "As much news as I watch, I have a better grasp of the state and federal budget because of the Health Summit."

Kevin-Dat V ujoins other advocates at the State Capitol

From FVCA's budget analysis, Kevin could see the gravity of the reductions at a glance: "I calculated the total of the trigger cuts and overall cuts, and it was $7 billion, $936 million. Those numbers are about me. Just to see that opened my eyes in a big way." The Health Summit armed Kevin with knowledge that has given him more leverage and confidence when speaking with legislators, including Insurance Commissioner Mike Villines and a representative of Senator Thad Cochran, cosponsor of the Blind Persons Return to Work Act.

STORIES OF 2010 SUMMIT:

The Padillas

 On Legislative Day, the Padillas visited to the State Capitol to meet with State Senator Mark Leno: "Mark Leno gave us time, seemed genuinely interested, and inquired about my son's disability. Our story matters, especially when shared with legislators."

Kenneth, Cinthya and Nathan Padilla with Senator Mark Leno

The Padillas walked away with newfound confidence and insight. With regard to state agencies, Kenneth Padilla says, "I've been better willing to work with them because . . . I know more laws. The result has been positive and has made us grow." When state agency representatives ask how he has been well informed, Kenneth tells them about the Summit's Legislation Day. This, he explains, has opened many doors to an often closed system.
